Utvärderingsformer
I conducted 3 evaluations this course: a midcourse evaluation, a final evaluations, and an evaluation of the students' own learning (called "Evaluate yourself at the end of the course"). These three provide a good basis for this course report.

Sammanfattning av studenternas kursvärderingar
The students "strongly agree" that they have achieved the learning outcomes.
The students "strongly agree" that the learning activities helped them achieve these outcomes.
The students "strongly agree" that the examination forms show how well they have achieved the learning outcomes.
Students are "very pleased" with the whole course. There were no requests for improvements, and they particularly liked the way the transition to an digital course worked so well.

Analys
The course has reached a level of excellence. One weakness might be the need to consider more the students who have accessibility problems. Perhaps two classes a week online and two classes a week on campus? It seems reasonable that on campus should also be recorded and posted for those who can't attend. The pre-recorded lectures are valuable, and the students greatly appreciated them. However, it would be good for them to have subtitles.
The classroom time was spent on almost exclusively student lead activities. These cannot be recorded in Zoom, but all the tasks are uploaded with instructions in PowerPoints for those who cannot attend. The same could be done for the on-campus lessons (I say lessons, because nothing done live was ever a lecture.)

Åtgärdsplan
The only improvements are to consider how much should go back to campus-based teaching.

Förslag till revidering av kursplan
There are no changes really needed to this course plan, except to update the literature by removing the year and issue number of the main book, which is actually irrelevant. All issues work well.

My concern with updating this is that it won't then match the IMER course that shares the same lectures. Therefore, I will not update this course yet. Unless the IMER course is owned by CAKL. EN211L
