Forms of evaluation

Describe the method(s) and implementation for both the formative and the summative course evaluation
The formative course evaluation was carried out as a semi-structured discussion at the course midpoint. In this discussion, student met in small groups and responded to a prompt: what works, what does not and why?. Then students presented their ideas to each other to create a common class response and then these principles were implemented in the remainder of the course planning. The summative course evaluation was administered using MAU survey and results are given in the following section.

Summary of the students' course evaluations

The students' views are objectively summarised here based on the various course evaluations for the course (see above). Individuals may not be named in the course report.
The course evaluation asked five questions on a 6-point likert scale. The questions and their answers were: To what extent do you consider the learning objectives of the course to be relevant to your needs and perspectives? (mean = to a large extent, median = to a large extent, mode = to a very large extent);

To what extent do you think the learning activities were productive in supporting your learning? (mean = to a large extent, median = to a large extent, mode = to an extent); To what extent do you consider that formative assignments throughout the course supported your learning? (mean = to a large extent, median = to a large extent, mode = to a very large extent); To what extent has the course given you opportunities to learn in collaboration with others? (mean = to a large extent, median = to a large extent, mode = to a large extent); To what extent has the course met your expectations? (mean = to a large extent, median = to a large extent, mode = to a large extent). Overall, the mode, median, and mean of course response, which may be a proxy for effectiveness of the course, is to a large extent. The response rate to the survey was, however, 30%. So a majority of students did not evaluate the course.

Summary of the evaluations of the teaching team

The views of the teaching team regarding the content, learning activities and assessment formats of the course are summarised here.

This course was only taught by Katherine Doerr, the responsible faculty member.

Analysis

The analysis is based on a summary of the students' and teachers' individual and joint course evaluations. Both success factors and problems are identified.

It appears that the content is in accordance with what students expect the course to be, and that the learning objectives are appropriate to their needs. The method of assessment is deemed well aligned to the objectives, as students respond that having formative assignments was supportive of their learning to a large extent. Students had the opportunity to learn in collaboration with others to a large extent. While the fully-online approach to the course enabled a range of learning activities, these were slightly more limited than what would be possible if the students also met face-to-face. The main problem is low response rate for the course evaluation.

Action plan

The short-term and long-term changes that are to be implemented are specified here, along with a timeline. If no action is planned to address a specified problem, this decision must be justified.

The action plan is to encourage higher response rates for the course evaluation by more thoroughly explaining to students the importance of their participation in the evaluation, encouraging them to complete the evaluation, and devoting some class time to complete the evaluation.

Proposed revisions to the course syllabus

Suggestions for possible revisions to the syllabus are proposed here, supported by the above evaluation and the action plan.

The syllabus had been revised prior to this course implementation. At this time, given that overall students were satisfied to a large extent, no revisions are proposed.

Information on course reports

The course report is an important instrument for the development of courses and programmes, as well as for guaranteeing student influence in this work. The Decision on the model for systematic education-related quality work at the Faculty of Education and Society (UTB 3.1-2017/410) indicates that course reports constitute the basis for the programme boards' efforts to systematically monitor the quality of the programme as a whole.

The C*ourse evaluation process at the Faculty of Education and Society* (UTB 3..2.2-2018/479) specifies what applies for the course report, including feedback to students.

The course report should include background information/key figures and a summary of the students' course evaluations, as well as analysis and an action plan together with any suggestions for revision of the course syllabus.

The course report is to be published in connection with other information about the course.
