Evaluation forms

The course was evaluated formatively and recurrently through oral reconciliations.

The course was evaluated summatively through an oral discussion at the end of the course.

Summary of students' course evaluations

The progress of the course was discussed recurrently throughout the course at group supervisions and at regular teaching activities.

The summative oral evaluation at the end of the course gave an overall positive picture, but students also presented ideas about things that they thought could be improved. In general, there did not seem to be any problems with the course from the students' point of view.

Course material, lectures, as well as guest lectures – academic as well as by practitioners – were appreciated.

Some of the students stressed that a greater emphasis could have been placed on comparing governance models, instead of on exemplifying with actual organisation, and that breakout rooms could have been used to a greater extent.

Moreover, some students expressed that they missed the opportunity to meet teachers and students on campus and in the class room, but were fully aware of that the reason was Covid-19.

Summary of teachers' evaluation

The course worked well. The guest lectures turned out very well and were both relevant and appreciated by course coordinator, teachers and students.

Analysis

With a new course coordinator and with no suggestions for revision of course syllabus from previous year, no changes were made this year's syllabus. However, to invite an external expert in area of governance from the Open University, England, provided added value to the course.

Action plan

Course coordinator must make sure to use the summative electronic course evaluation in the future.

Suggestions for revision of course syllabus

None.
