Student's perspective (To be completed by the course coordinator)

Summary of the students' course evaluations: (The five university-wide questions should be included:

1. The students participating in the discussions feel they have achieved the course's intended learning outcomes to 100%
2. They feel that the course's working methods/learning activities have been absolutely supportive in learning to achieve the intended learning outcomes.
3. Students feel that the course's examination forms have given them the opportunity to show how well they have achieved the intended learning outcomes to a little above 80%. Some had preferred more oral presentations instead of written reflection papers.

4. the course has met and exceeded students' expectations in general. Individual students had expected to be made read more theory, though.
5. The course is built around students' own planning and active participation. This has been appreciated very much, as the course gave students the opportunity to take responsibility for their own learning 100%.

Teacher's perspective (To be completed by the course coordinator)

Summary of the teacher's views/Results: Teaching this course is centred on application and reflection on on-course productive work. The process and results are good and will be repeated on future courses. Teachers want to be and remain on this course :)

Analysis and action plan (To be completed by the course coordinator)

Analysis: the course works well in its balance of theory and practice. in experimental production in various media and in reflection on these activities. No substantial changes are planned, duly.

Action plan: Literature will be revised / updated carefully, the puppet-building workshop will be switched to other forms of puppetry to test variety in this medium, too.
